

A photograph showing a residential street completely inundated with muddy, brown floodwater. In the foreground, a small, makeshift dam or weir is built across the street, with water cascading over it. A large log and some debris are visible in the water near the dam. In the background, a two-story house is partially submerged, with water reaching its windows. The sky is overcast and grey, suggesting a storm or recent heavy rain. The overall scene depicts a severe flooding event.
